Kids at The Cabot Series Returns Virtually Free family-friendly programming vital to the North Shore Community and Beyond

(Beverly, MA – October 26, 2020) During the pandemic, The Cabot has found new and innovative ways to engage all its audiences – from small concert gatherings at Hale Farm – to today, when the The Cabot proudly announces its “Kids at The Cabot” children’s series is returning for its 2020-21 season beginning on Saturday, November 14th at 10:30am. Thanks to the generosity of returning sponsor New England BioLabs, all performances in the season are free to the public.

“While we’re sad we can’t host our community’s children and their families at the theater, we’re still thrilled to be able to provide local family-friendly programming virtually,” J. Casey Soward, Executive Director of The Cabot, said. “Thanks to New England BioLabs, we’re able to try new and exciting ways to bring live entertainment to our patrons. ‘Kids at The Cabot’ is just the beginning of testing the water on what kind of technologies are available to us to broadcast to a large audience.”

There is no cost to view the performances, however donations are welcome (suggested donation: $10).

The full line-up of the 2020-21 season of Kids at The Cabot is below. All performances begin at 10:30am and will be hosted once a month from November to April (except for November with two performances). Performances will be streamed virtually and more information will be provided on how to access them closer to showtime.

About The Cabot

For a century, The Cabot in Beverly has been a local treasure, a dream palace at the heart of the downtown, and a welcoming gathering place for generations of North Shore residents. Originally known as The Ware, this opulent, neoclassical-style theater was built in 1920 by the renowned architectural firm Funk & Wilcox. Originally used for vaudeville shows and silent movies, it was later owned by the movie chain E.M. Loews. In 1976, The Cabot was purchased by Le Grand David and his own Spectacular Magic Company, and for the next 36 years was home to this world-famous magic show. The Cabot is now being transformed into a 21st century venue for audiences of all ages, with nationally recognized live performers, current and classic movies and community events. Since its reopening in November 2014, The Cabot is once again a vital part of the North Shore's artistic life. The Cabot is celebrating its 100th anniversary in 2020. visit <https://thecabot.org>.
